Human Harbinger: Robert “Robby” G. Atticus

Zombie Harbinger: Lazarus Omega (The first Zombie Harbinger).

Plot: After the new outbreak, General Robert G. Atticus, commander of the Resistance Coalition Forces (Rez for short), and leader of the resistance 10 years ago, rallies the humans.

“Despite our differences we all have two things in common, we survived the first war and we’re a Zombie’s food of choice— I trust this is enough to Bind us.”

Mirroring the human rally, an old Zombie, become immortal after years of mutations, rises from the ranks of the horde to lead it. He is the first Zombie Harbinger, Lazarus Omega.

“This is not the same horde as before; we are stronger, faster, smarter and now lead by our own... we will be unstoppable, we will decimate humanity, we will feed again.”

This new iteration of the zombie virus came from an intended vaccine to the zombie virus, which failed and, instead, created the new kinds of zombies that we now know (intelligent, closer to the harbinger state?) and love and fear.

At the direction of their new leader Robby, the humans sought purchase in the new aggie wasteland, scouring campus for the materials necessary to create a headquarters. To power their new HQ, the Human's also searched for a resistance engineer that had been downed in the area. Despite efforts to keep them secret, the Human's plans were discovered by Lazarus and the horde, and they made plans of their own...

The Humans prevailed in their goals, though not without severe casualties. Having established their headquarters, they looked to expand their territory and clean up their beloved campus #takebackcampus. While cleaning up campus, the Humans found the means to create an experimental field-vaccine that could cure the Zombie virus if taken immediately after infection. Lazarus was furious at the establishment of the Humans and released debilitating gases where Human leaders were stationed, neutralizing any weapons that the Humans had against the Zombies while in the gas.

Torn from the mind of an eaten human, Lazarus learned of the newly discovered vaccine and, taking an elite group of Zombies (death corps, or death captains), he stole the human's entire supply of biological material necessary to produce the vaccine, and polluted the vaccines already made, making them ineffective. Using the biological material, the Horde developed an airborne version of the Zombie virus, that they planned to release later that night. The humans, discovering the airborne strain in a feat of espionage, set out to reclaim the biological material from the horde to prevent the airborne strain, and restore vaccine capabilities. While successful, the humans were massacred in the process.

Dismayed and enraged at the losses, Human leader Robby commanded his soldiers to take an aggressive front against the Horde, emboldening the Humans with the hopes and dreams of a young girl named "New Life Lily," to purge various areas on campus of Zombie activity. While diminished in number, the Humans struck victory after victory under the symbol of New Life Lily in their aggression against the Horde, to the chagrin of Lazarus. But, as if in consolation, the Horde made contact with the Zombie Lords Jackal (from Arizona), and Xombie (from Alberta), who helped Lazarus to discover the means to create other Zombies in his image, not immortal like him, but unique and powerful... super zombies. Lazarus named his super zombies after animals to reflect their individual traits. In honor of the Zombie Lord from Arizona, he named the rest of the horde 'Jackals.'

Lazarus with his Horde of Jackals and Robby with his resistance readied their groups for a final stand. The Humans worked to build a fortress on the Quad and the Zombie readied to destroy it and feast on the meat bags inside. The fight began and the Humans held off the Zombie horde until the Zombies found a relic allowing them resurrect instantaneously upon being killed. With their near unstoppable numbers they began to overpower the Humans until, at the last moment, reinforcements from Effect International (a team of zombie fighters) dropped in with zombie repellant gear. With the new gear, the Humans pushed towards the Zombie spawn point, destroyed the relic, and drove Lazarus Omega and his Jackals out of Utah State.
